Character gains Rajai the bride

TEHRAN, Aug. 24 (AFP) — The wife of Iranian President Muhammad Ali Rajai confessed in an interview published here that she chose her husband over a very wealthy, capitalist admirer because of his sterling spiritual qualities.

"I had another admirer, a capitalist and very rich. But I contrasted the spiritual and the material aspects. I thought about it a lot and God helped me a great deal, Once I'd made a decision, I knew it was the right one," Mrs. Rajai told the daily Zan Ruz (woman today).

I have always been happy and satisfied," with my husband. She praised him for his "moral, scientific and intellectual stature." The daily printed no picture of her and did not give her first name.

"At times, I was furious at the wickedness of (deposed Iranian President Abolhassan) Bani-Sadr and his newspaper, Islamic Revolution, against my husband, but he (Rajai) told me calmly that...all this would end," Mrs. Rajai said. She counseled the paper's readers to "act so as to satisfy God' and "continue until the world becomes in our eyes vain and and organized.

A week ago, the same Iranian students held a press conference at the Iranian embassy in Oslo after occupying it one after-noon and holding the staff. They were after-ward questioned by police. The following day, the Norwegian authorities took the stu-dents to the Swedish frontier without laying any charges against them. The police are particularly well equipped to deal with such inci-dents, following a violent attack on the West German Embassy in Stockholm April 23,

The attack, and the temporary occupation which followed, were carried out by six West German extremists, who wanted the release of the "masterminds" of West German terrorism, imprisoned at the time. When their demands were rejected, the terrorists murdered the military attache and commercial adviser, before blowing up part of the building. One of the six died in the blast and the other five were extradited to West Germany.

Police arrested the group of young Iranians. Some damage to the residence was reported by police. Special detachments of riot police had joined the ring of police surrounding the residence, located in an exclusive suburb of Stockholm, after it was seized Monday morning. The police moved in shortly after 1 p.m. to end the four-hour occupation.

The spokesman for the group staging Monday's occupation cited a list of demands. "Our action is in protest against all the crimes of the Khomeini regime — the shooting and hanging of revolutionary and political prisoners in Iran," he said.

In a telephone call to Reuters in London, a girl who said she was calling from Stockholm on behalf of the group described the Iranians as members of the Paykar organization. She said the ambassador would be held until their demands had been met.

These were freedom for political prisoners, in Iran and an end to executions and torture: an international or Swedish committee to go to Iran to investigate prisons and prisoners: a cable from the Swedish government condemning executions and the detention of political prisoners: and permission to hold a press conference to publicized the plight of Speaking to a group of police offers in Tehran, Ayatollah Khomeini Monday appealed to the opponents of his regime to give themselves up, saying their repentance would be accepted. He said opposition politicians outside the country had no chance of taking power in Iran.

AWACS: Congress notified

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 - President Ronald Reagan sent an informal notification to Congress Monday of his intention to sell five AWACS radar surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia. The informal notification, which is a procedural courtesy the administration has hinted at for weeks, begins a 20-day countdown to allow Congress time to investigate the sale. The actual countdown will not begin until Congress reconvenes Sept. 9.

Following the 20-day period, Congress will have 30 more days in which to hold hearings and, if need be, withhold the sale.

Many Congressmen have speculated that the issue may lead to Reagan's first major defeat in his dealings with Congress. The AWACS proposal is the first foreign policy battle Reagan has waged with Congress. On ABC-TV's Issues and Answers Program Sunday, Secretary of State Alexander Haig called the AWACS sale an important move to improve the strategic determ tions of both the United States and Saudi Arabia. Haig said the United States will continue attempts to convince Israel that the AWACS will not threaten Israeli security. Should a battle with Congress ensue over the issue, "we (the administration) intend to win," Haig said.

U.S.to run Riyadh medical complex

Dumez awarded SR700m contract

TAIF, Aug. 24 (SPA) — Second Deputy Premier and Commander of the National Guard Prince Abdullah signed Monday an agreement with the United States government for administering, operating and main-taining the Guard's medical complex in Riyadh. The agreement was signed, on behalf of the U.S. government, by Gen. John

It is the second such contract to be signed this year. The National Guard concluded a similar agreement with the British government in May for administering, operating and maintaining the force's medical complex in Jeddha and drawing and implementing plans for provision and development of medical services. The estimate budget for the agreement was put at SR1 billion.

Prince Abdullah also signed a SR700 million contract for building 526 villas. The contract, awarded to Dumez of France, will provide housing for National Guard officers.

The signing attended by Prince Badr, deputy commander of the National Guard. Nasser Al-Shitri, adviser at the royal court; Abdul Aziz Al-Tiwaijri, National Guard undersecretary and other senior officials.

The hospital complex in Riyadh was built by a group of Belgian firms, Eurosystem Health Consortium. It chiefly constitutes a 500-bed hospital of which 200 are specified for emergency, an analysis and medical record center and an integrated medical city with housing for personnel.

The complex has been built according to the best standards and becomes one of the most advanced and finest medical complexes in the world. "Therefore, the agreement with the United States government was concluded to realize one of our government's objectives, for providing best medical services," a National Guard statement said.

One of the major objectives of the agreement with the U.S. government is to concentrate on developing the efficiency of national personnel necessary for administering, operating and maintaining the medical installations, the statement said. This is to be achieved through study and training programs inside and outside the Kingdom in various fields, with the aim of reaching selfsufficiency.

Meanwhile, the contract with Dumez for housing officers comes as a complementary stage of the first phase of National Guard for which SR7.385 billion has been spent. The 10.296 villas built so far in Riyadh, Jeddah, Dammam, Hasa and Taif will house soldiers because they are the most needy category for comfortable housing, the statement said.

The villas to be built under the contract are villas, assign a 436 square meter area for each unit. The 34 villas of the second category are to be built on a 614 square meter area each.

The contract is to be implemented in a 'key handing' method — the villas will be completely furnished and ready for residence with all basic facilities as roads; sewage. water, electricity and telephone networks and gardens and parks. Other facilities schools, mosques and markets — are under preparation and necessary contracts will be let shortly, the statement said.

Other phases will be undertaken to povide suitable modern housing for all National Guard personnel in all parts of the Kingdom, the statement said. After the signing, Prince Abdullah handed out the project's site to the consultancy and contracting companies.

Tuwaijri said the Riyadh hospital complex administering, operating and maintaining agreement's initial during its six years liable to increase or reduction after consultations between the Kingdom and U.S. govern-

U.S. slams door on IFATCA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP) — U.S. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis has flatly rejected a plea by international air traffic controllers to resume talks with the striking U.S. Controllers Union.

The International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations, meeting in Amsterdam Sunday, urged President Ronald Reagan to reopen contract talks with the U.S. Controllers Union in an attempt to end the three-week strike by nearly 12,000 U.S. con-

Lewis said Sunday he would meet with representatives of the international group to try to assure them that U.S. skies are, safe, but said the administration's position against renewed negotiations stands firm.

"We're pleased to listen to any ideas they have internationally." Lewis said on the NBC Program, "Meet the Press." "But this is really a matter between our government and the traffic controllers ... We're not going to develop our policy based on what they decide on the international field."

He said any new talks would be with the controllers who have remained on the job, declaring that they were the "people that stuck with us and they're the people we're going to stick with..."

On the same NBC program, Robert E. Poli, president of the striking professional air traffic controllers organization, said there continued to be "a line of communication ... between certain people in the administration and intermediaries and myself."

But Poli, who appeared separately from Lewis, said he would not characterize the communications as either negotiations or talks. Poli said he did not consider the international group's announcement in Amsterdam a setback and said there is still the possibility of a future international action in support of the U.S. controllers.

Lewis said President Reagan stands firm and believes as a matter of principle that there should be no resumed negotiations. He rejected any suggestion that comments by Labor Secretary Ray Donovan last week might mean a possibility that some striking controllers might be given a grace period during which to return to work.

Lewis said Reagan "feels very strongly" that the controllers strike "is a breaking of the oath and a breaking of the law".

Baby's body untraced Grieving kin blame airline

TAIPEI, Aug. 24 (Agencies) — As grieving relatives condemned Taiwan's domestic airline, investigators late Monday were still searching the wreckage of a Boeing 737 that crashed Saturday in central Taiwan for the body of a baby, the only one of the 110 victims not yet found.

About 500 relatives of those killed in Taiwan's worst air disaster met at the Taipei funeral home Monday in an emotional confrontation with a representative of the Taiwan Civil Aeronautics Board and other officials. With bandkerchiefs and face masks over their noses, weeping relatives walked among 42 burned and mangled bodies lying uncovered on the ground outside the funeral home, trying to identify them.

Sixty-seven other victims already identified have been placed in coffins, and a few have already been claimed by families, officials said. Searchers in the heavily-wooded hills of Sanyi, 94 miles southwest of here, said they believed the lost body was that of a three-month-old baby, and might have been

country's industrial heartland, killing at least

Some communities and small towns were cut off by floods and debris blocking roads and railway lines hampered relief workers. Thad, the most destructive typhoon hit central Japan's industrial and densely-populated east coast with winds of 126 kms per hour, left nearly 26,000 people homeless.

The typhoon, later downgraded to a tropical depression over the sea in the Soviet far east, dumped up to 50 cms of rain over many parts of Japan.

Rivers burst their banks and caused widespread flooding. About 5,000 families were evacuated from their homes when the Koka River overflowed near Ryugasaki city, about 40 kms from Tokyo.

In Suzuka, west of the capital, 10 persons were feared to have drowned in their homes. Many others were killed in some of the 360 landslides capped by the typhoon and when six small boats were swept away on a lake. Police said the typhoon paralyzed air, rail and ferry services and caused big traffic jams on roads crowded with returning holidaymakers.

thrown into the woods.

During the meeting at the funeral home, a number of Taiwanese wore cloth signs that labelled the Far Eastern Air Transport, owner of the Boeing a "murderer," and claimed the bodies were being handled in an "improper, inconsiderate and inhuman" manner.

They also demanded that airline officials who allowed the plane to take off after it turned back from another flight because of pressurization problems should be severely punished. The plane had originally been scheduled to fly to the Pescadore Islands off Taiwan's west coast early Saturday, but it turned back minutes after takeoff. The pressure problem and minor malfunctions in the brakes and landing gear were solved and the plane was cleared for the run to the southern port of Kaohsiung.

Nineteen minutes after takeoff, it exploded and crashed, killing all 104 passengers and six crew. But airline officials said none of the earlier malfunctions could have caused the explosion.

"Since the first pilot said that aircraft was in no condition to fly, who gave the order to the second pilot to take off," one unidentified man demanded angrily. "Whoever made the decision to let the plane fly should be shot," said another relative at the meeting.

The relatives claimed the airline failed to notify them after the crash, and the first they knew family members were killed was when they read it in the newspapers.

The coroners said almost all the 110 passengers in the Boeing 737 were burned to death, refuting charges that the tragedy was caused by a bomb. They said the bodies showed no signs of having suffered an explosion. Eyewitnesses said they heard two or three explosions, then saw the aircraft break into two in the air.

The flight data box and the voice recorder box have both been recovered, but an official of the Civil Aeronautics Administration (CAA) expressed concern Sunday when the voice recorder was found burned and deformed.

The flight data box revealed that the plane's last recorded altitude was 11,400 feet. The regulation altitude over the crash scene in Miaoli county is 20,000 feet, CAA officials said. Two experts of the American Boeing Company inspected the crash site Monday, immediately after their arrival here

Gold declines to $422 . LONDON, Aug. 24 (R) - The price of gold dropped sharply on international bullion markets Monday, ending a surge which had pushed it up by about $40 an ounce in two At the London afternoon fixing by bullion dealers, gold was priced at $422 an ounce, from Friday's close of $431. It declined further and closed at $422.50. Dealers had suggested that gold's recent rise might be the start of a sustained upwards movement after reaching a low point of just over $390 an ounce earlier this month. The metal has fallen from around $850 in January last year, shortly after the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, and dealers said there has been a market feeling recently that it might have become underpriced.

One of the factors behind its rise over the last two weeks, dealers said, was the sudden reversal in the fortunes of the dollar, which dropped sharply against other major currencies prompting speculators to sell dollars and buy gold.

Dealers in London said the dollar showed signs of recovery Monday attracting investors back from gold.

Last week, bullion dealers were expressing conflicting views over the metal's prospects with some saying it was set to rise above $450

The dollar rose from 2.4460 West German marks at Friday's London close to 2.4652 in late trading as the pound sterling dropped back to 1.8667 dollars from 1.8770.

For his part, Sheikh Abdul Wahhab Abdul Wasie, the minister of pilgrimage and endowments, briefed the Council on the provisions taken to transport pilgrims inside the holy places in Makkah and Medina and between Jeddah, Makkah and Medina. Virtually, the SIDF financed all of the investment in power facilities since 1975. The field manages a special allocation from the sovernment for this purpose. During the second plan, the fund made loan commitments of SR20.5 billion to electricity companies and disbursed SR17.8 billion.

The electricity sector continued to grow rapidly in response to increasing demand. In 1950, power companies sold over 18 billion billowatt-hours of electricity to 824,000 customers — an increase of 35 percent in total sales and 13 percent in the number of customers compared to the previous year. Their total capacity reached 6,527 megawatts by the and of 1980, from the 1,080 figure of 1975.

One year after its creation, the SIDF had financed 21 private industrial projects in 1975. By the end of the second development plen, the fund's clients had reached 577.

The government policy underlines fullest encouragement for private business to invest in viable and competitive industry. This policy is implemented through the licensing procedures and the industrial estate programs of the Ministry of Industry and Electricity, and through the leading facilities of the SIDF.

Italy attacks Reagan for Libyan episode

ROME, Aug. 24 (Agencies) - Iraly's Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio said in an interview published Sunday that U.S. President Ronald Reagan acted in the U.S.-Libyan dogfight like someone "who lights a cigarette near a stick of dynamite."

Gunboat diplomacy, OAU says

Lagorio, a socialist, also said that the U.S. Embassy in Rome failed to tell Italy before the air battle that the United States planned to test how Libya would react to a violation of what it claims as its airspace. Lagorio made the statements in an interview published in the socialist-line Rome daily La Republica. Defense ministry spokesman Capt. Marco Novelli confirmed that the minister was quoted accurately.

Italy has taken a particular interest in the dogfight Wednesday because it took place over the Mediterranean about 350 miles south of Sicily. The American jet fighters that shot down two Libyan warplanes were launched from an aircraft carrier with the U.S. Sixth Fleet, which is based in the Italian port of Gaeta north of Naples.

"President Reagan certainly defended the right of navigation in international waters, but he did it with the same dose of prudence as somebody who lights a cigarette near a stick of dynamite," Lagorio said.

"You have the right to smoke, but not to cause an explosion," the minister said. Reagan said a day after the air battle that he personally ordered the navy to challenge a Libyan territorial claim and thus display American strength. "Certainly the Farnesina (Italian foreign ministry) was not notified of the intention of Reagan to test the reaction of the Libyans," Lagorio said.

Jordan, Qatar leaders

PARIS, Aug. 24 (R) - King Hussein of Jordan will have dinner talks with President François Mitterrand Wednesday before the French leader pays his first official visit to the Middle East next month. Elysee presidential officials said Monday.

The Jordanian monarch will spend a few days in France on his way home from Spain. The ruler of Qatar, Sheikh Khalifa bin Hamad al-Thani, is due to have lunch with Mitterrand Wednesday, the officials said.

King Hussein and Sheikh Khalifa will be meeting the new Socialist president for the first time since he took over from President Valery Giscard d'Estaing May. Mitterrand, who received King Khaled in June, is due to pay an official visit to Saudi Arabia at the end and accused the Reagan administration of gunboat diplomacy.

A statement issued Sunday night from the 50-nation OAU's headquarters called on the U.S. to "stop forthwith its campaign of belligerency that will be injurious to U.S.-African relations." The OAU accused the U.S. of planning the action and said it could not accept such aggression against a member state. It added: "We want to impress on the. Reagan administration that the era of gunboat diplomacy is over."

An inter-Arab council representing 12 Arab states ended weekend talks at Bludam, northern Syria, has in the meantime called for greater Arab solidarity against Israel and condemning the U.S. downing of two Libyan jets. In a closing statement, the Inter-Arab Parliamentary Union Council denounced the U.S.-Libyan incident of Wednesday as "air

In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat was quoted Monday as saying that Libyan leader Muhammar Qaddafi should be "executed" if he were the official who ordered Libyan pilots to shoot at U.S. jet fighters off the Libyan coast last week during naval maneuvers by the Sixth Fleet.

"I condemn Qaddati and consider him responsible for what happened," Sadat said in his first public comment on the incident, published in Mayo, the weekly mouthpiece of Sadat's ruling National Democratic Party.

A foreign ministry spokesman of the United Arab Emirates said in Abu Dhabi Monday that UAE will look after Libya's interests in the United States. The announcement was made shortly after the departure from the Emirates of Qaddafi. The spokesman said the move was at Libya's request and had the approval of the U.S. government, the WAM newsagency said. The U.S. Embassy in Tripoli and the Libyan mission in Washington have been closed for several months, though diplomatic links were never officially severed. Belgium looks after U.S. interests in Libya, where 2,000 Americans work. There are about 4,000 Libyan students in the U.S.

Qaddafi made a brief stopover in Kuwait Monday and held airport talks with Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad al-Sabah, ruler of Kuwait, enroute for Syria. Qaddafi flew in from a one-day visit to the United Arab Emirates. His plane took off to the Syrian capital of Damascus about one hour after it landed at Kwait airport, the statement added.

The statement did not report the topics discussed in the airport talks. But reliable sources said the aftermath of the air clash between Libyan and U.S. planes over the Mediterranean was a main topic of the talks.

EEC's peace plan dead, says PLO

PARIS, Aug. 24 (R) - The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) regards the dea of a Middle East peace initiative by the European Economic Community (EEC), as dead, the PLO's representative in France, Ibrahim Souss, said in an interview published here.

He told the French press agency Agence Centrale de Presse (ACP), the PLO would deal with the EEC countries individually. The idea of a European peace initiative was mooted last year and was discussed at the Venice summit of EEC leaders.

Asked to comment on the new French government's policies on the Middle East, Souss said they represented a step backwards. He called on France to recognize the PLO as the only legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson is due to visit the Middle East next weekend. French newspapers have said he will meet PLO leader Yasser Arafat in Beirut but there has been no official confirmation.

In Moscow, the Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda Monday charged the United States with seeking to "frighten the Arab countries" into accepting its Middle East settlement aimed at making the area "a zone of American influence." Acting in the Middle East "through the agency of the Zionists", the United States was "entirely responsible" for the bloodshed there, the newspaper declared in a virulent attack on American military aid to Israel.

TEL AVIV. Aug. 24 (Agencies) — A very interesting point that the Egyptian people have not accepted the Camp David accords signed by President Sadat with Israel and that they are not prepared to compromise with the Zionist state came to light Sunday when Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin briefed his cabinet colleagues about his proposed visit to Egypt Tuesday to meet Sadat,

During the discussion, a memorandum prepared by the Israeli Foreign Ministry on tourism, trade and cultural exchanges was circulated. The report on tourism noted that though thousands of Israelis have visited Egypt, traffic in the other direction was disappointing. The report noted that only a few hundred Egyptians, most of them officials, only had visited Israel, on a official missions.

The report has been brought out obviously as the Israelis want the Egyptian people to accept the discredited peace treaty. Begin may take up this matter when he meets Sadat in Alexandria Tuesday.

Satellite crashes

PERTH, Australia, Aug. 24 (AP) — A satellite crashed near the township of Marble Bar in northwestern Australia Sunday night, astronomer Michael Candy said Monday.

Candy, an astronomer at Perth Observatory who had been tracking the satellite, said he thought it was Cosmos 434, a Soviet satellite launched in 1971. He said the Cosmos 434 was expected to return to earth last Thursday.

Candy said parts of the satellite were seen to land in the remote northwest area and started a fire. A search of the area was being carried out, authorities said. Marble Bar is 1.127 kms north of Perth in one of the driest, most sparsely populated areas of Australia.

PARIS, Aug. 24 (AP) - Former U.S. President Richard Nixon arrived here Sunday night on the start of a two-week private visit to Europe, which does not include plans to meet with foreign leaders.

Nixon, who resigned as president eight years ago this month, made no comment after his arrival at Paris' Charles de Gaulle Airport. French make biggest haul of narcotics BREST, West France, Aug. 23 (AFP) — French customs made their biggest narcotics haul ever when they netted $6 million worth of cannabis resin aboard a 55-ton Britishregistered yacht near here Friday, it was revealed Monday.

Two West Germans were arrested after customs made a chance boarding of the Con quest III laden with 1.75 tons of cannabis which police said was intended for a "north European country".

The 60-foot wooden yacht, registered in Falmouth, Cronwall, and bristling with radio equipment, had reportedly lost its bearing off Brittany's western coast. It had sailed from Lisbon, Portugal, to the Mediterranean where it rendezvoused with another ship to take on the drugs, police said.

Customs said they stumbled across 250 kilos cannabis resin hidden under the yacht's gear and fuel cans. A full-scale search revealed three more caches under doublebottom panels containing the rest of the haul in plastic-wrapped one-kilo sticks.

Police said the yacht's skipper was to be paid 135,000 marks (about $50,000) for the trip. According to police, he had previously been sentenced to four years' imprisonment for cigarette smuggling.

One of the two Germans, both said to be in their 50's was seasick when customs boarded the yacht off the northwestern French island of Ouessant. Police said the Atlantic sea route was often used by traffickers to fery drugs to northern Europe. During the last four months of 1980, customs found 19 bags containing 570 kilos of cannabis resin wash along the Atlantic shoreline.

needed to solve the refugee problem, he said. In March, the immigration policy commission recommended legislation requiring the establishment of a new means of identification for all those eligible to work. The suggestions included a counterfeit-resistant social security card, which Hesburgh favors. Without a simple means to identify who is qualified to work and who is not, sanctions against employers hiring illegal immigrants cannot be enforced, Hesburgh said.

He added another Reagan interdepartmental immigration study group opposed the national identity card and suggested requiring two existing means of identification for workers -- such as a birth certificate, driver's license or the present social security card.

In urging use of a new card, Hesburgh said. "new laser and magnetic technology could make it practically counterfeit-proof and more care could be used in issuing the new

Cheysson meets Gandhi World tension

NEW DELHI, Aug. 24 (Agencies) -French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson held an hour-long meeting Monday with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and said later that they discussed growing international tension.

discussed

"We discussed the tension in the world and the region in the context of the remarks of (Indian) External Affairs Minister Narasimha Rao" the previous night, Cheysson told reporters.

No aides were present at the talks between Cheysson and Mrs. Gandhi. An Indian spokesman described the meeting as "extensive and useful." He said that Cheysson handed her a letter from President Francois Mitterrand inviting Mrs. Gandhi to France. Her visit has been "tentatively" scheduled for Nov. 12-14 this year, spokesman J. N. Dixit added.

Indian Minister of State for Defense Shivraj Patil called on Cheysson and it was believed that they discussed French arms supplies to India, particularly the sale of the Mirage-2000 for the Indian Air Force.

Sunday night, Rao told a banquet honoring Cheysson that India was alarmed by the revival of cold war tensions and interbloc rivalry and appealed to France to join an effort to defuse superpower rivalry and revive detente.

Responding to a question, the French leader said that proposed sales of American arms to Pakistan did not figure specifically in the talks. "We did nottalk in terms of an arms race on the subcontinent but of the tension in the world," he added. It was the highest-level meeting between the leaders of the two nations since Mitterrand came to power in the recent French elections, Cheysson, whose first round of talks with the Indian external affairs minister lasted nearly four hours, stressed that current Franco-Indian economic cooperation was too modest in view of the potential of India's 700 million people. Reinforcement of this cooperation was the best way of consolidating political cooperation between Paris and New Delhi, he-said.

The biggest French operations in India are a huge contract for the development of an aluminium plant in Orissa and the renewal two weeks ago of a contract with a French petroleum company to exploit offshore oil

After the French minister's first talks with Rao, the two sides stated that the various conflicts around the world could only be settled through "peaceful solutions without pre-

The two foreign ministers also looked into East-West relations. Cheysson said later that both countries had made a similar analysis of Soviet and American policies, but that they had "not always drawn the same conclusions".

On the Afghan issue, Indian diplomatic sources said New Delhi's position was not far removed from that of France, and that India was more and more concerned at its repercussions on neighboring Pakistan. India was specially concerned about moves in Washington on the delivery of F-16 fighter planes to Pakistan, the sources said.

100 ethnic Albanians jailed

BELGRADE, Aug. 24 (AFP) - As a sequel to last April's bloody riots in the southern Yugoslav province of Kosovo more than 100 members of the 1.4 million Albanian ethnic minority there have been jailed

In May the exemplarily lengthy sentences passed on five Albanian nationalists in the Macedonian capital of Skopje, the southernmost province adjoining Albania, was already an indiction of what could be in store for the Kosovo defendants.

In the event their sentences, meted out at the series of trials which opened in the Kosovo capital of Pristina July 12, have been appreciably more exemplary than those passed at Skopje — the maximum term this time being 18 months longer and the average length of eight years.

The accused were mostly teachers, students and children in secondary school, as well as a good numer, of peasants and workers. Notable among them was Adem Salihaj, a journalist for Kosovo television, and a 22-year-old former policeman, Bajram

The heaviest sentences were pased on those found guilty of joining Albanian nationalist organizations, which are militating to have the autonomous province Kosovo promoted to full republic status within the

OAU starts campaign on Namibia

SALISBURY, Aug. 24 (AFP) - Five foreign ministers from the Organization of African Unity (OAU) countries are to begin this week in Paris a tour of the five-nation Western contact group on Namibia, the Zimbabwean Foreign Ministry announced here Monday.

The five - from Zimbabwe, Kenya, Nigeria, Rwanda and Algeria - are to go to Paris, London, Ottawa, Washington and Bonn in preparation for the special United Nations General Assembly session on Namibia that is to start Sept. 3, the ministry said.

Zimbabwean Foreign Minister Witness Mangwende left were Sunday for Paris. In Nairobi, informed sources said that the four other foreign ministers were to be in Paris by Wednesday for the start of the tour.

The sources said that the trip was aimed at reaffirming: all of Africa's backing of U.N. resolution 435, calling for a ceasefire and constituent elections in Namibia. Each minister is said to represent one of Africa's five main regions.

"The special session is expected to press the United Nations to impose sanctions against South Africa in view of Pretoria's recalcitrance and the reneging on the implementation of U.N. resolution 435 on Namibia," a Zimbabwean Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

The OAU team is to be led by Kenvan Foreign Minister Cuko, the Zimbabwe Foreign Ministry said.

Stolen painting found

PARIS, Aug. 24 (AFP) - French police Monday announced they had found a valuable 18th century painting stolen 214 years ago. The work, "L'Union de la Peinture et du Dessin" by Royal artist Joseph Natoire, was found among many stolen objects when police raided a notorious receiver of stolen goods. Natoire decorated part of the Chateau of Versailles.

Presence of troops

Paris allays Nigerian fears

LAGOS, Aug. 24 (AFP) - French Cooperation and Development Minister Jean-Pierre Cot this weekend wound up a two-day official visit here which helped ease longstanding differences between France and Nigeria, observers said.

Cot said the trip was aimed at dissipating a certain tension" that has existed between two countries for a number of years as a result of the presence of French troops in Africa and France's policies stressing cooperation with Francophone African nations.

But Col. the first top official of President Francois Mitterrand's Socialist-dominated government to visit Nigeria, said the new French policy would consider Africa as a whole. He said Nigerian President Shebu Shagari understood Paris's position on the presence of French troops in Africa, "which is explained by the necessity of not triggering a destabilization by creating a void that would immediately be replaced by others."

The talks between Cot and Nigerian officials covered the two countries' common interests and dealt with key African issues. including South Africa and the Namibian independence question. About Namibia, Cotsaid France favored a diplomatic solution and that the Western contact group, made up of France, the United States, Canada, West Germany and Britain, provided a unique opportunity for a peaceful settlement. But he said the group was not operating easily and was close to breaking up.

France was also sceptical about imposing economic sanctions against South Africa, saying that the move would not be realistic without the support of all permanent members of the United Nations Security Council.

France and Nigeria agreed to a common strategy to try to resolve the problem in Chad, and both believed that a solution should be found by Africans without outside interference. Cot said France would not sell even a rifle to Libya as long it does not show peaceful intentions in the African continent." The French minister also held talks with Nigerian Defense Minister Akandi Niyangi, government secretary Shehy Mussa and other political and economic leaders.

China N-plan under attack

LONDON, Aug. 24 (AFP) - China's nuclear test program is running into criticism over radiation dangers from people living in the Lop Nur test site area, The Financial Times reported from Peking Monday.

It said: "an official in Arumqi, the capital of the far western province of Xinjiang, said the increasing incidence of cases of liver and lung in fections and even cancer was causing concern, and that some cases were being sent to Peking. Some people believed this was because of the testing, he said."

A Western diplomat on a recent visit to Urumqi, about 1,350 kms northwest of the area, was also told of fruit in at least one area developing 'rubber-like patches' and the fruit itself tending to wither away, the report

But another official, sceptical of contamination reports, said that the high cancer incidence among Xinjiang people was "a result of their diet." The Financial Times correspondent said that "medical teams and radiation experts meet regularly to discuss and monitor the psible effects of the nuclear test

HARD LESSONS

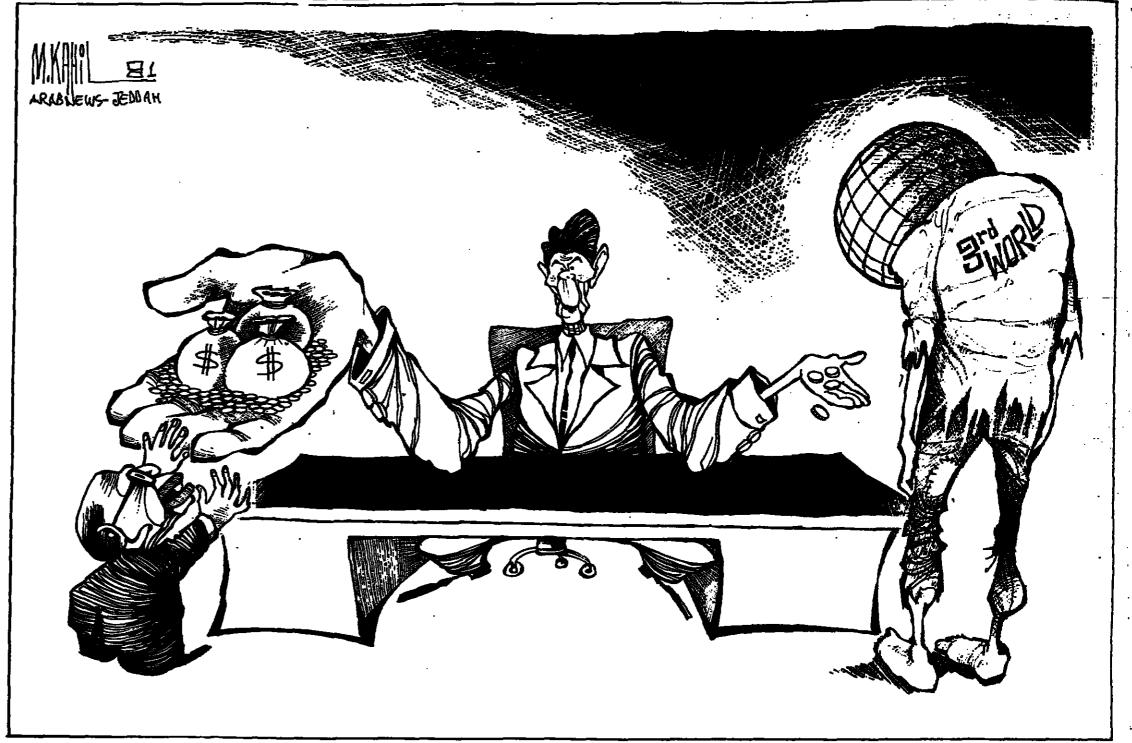

The two superpowers have been exchanging signs of wilinguess to talk to each other out of recognition, perhaps, that the present state of tension, even "cold war", between them will ultimately harm their interests. While it is of course too early to talk of an impending new "detente", there is a view that a new phase in the East-West relationship might be about to commence.

The rest of the world usually greets such a change in the international weather with relief. Yet also with a measure of apprehension. For as the recent experience of "detente" showed, the change from cold war to understanding is really a change from direct confrontation between the superpowers to proxy confrontations.

America had its hand sufficiently burnt in Vietnam to be convinced that it could reach its aims through using client states. A prime example now is the Middle East. For why get involved in a direct confrontation with the Arab world, while the same could be achieved through Israel's willingness and ability to intervene whenever and wherever it is deemed

For the Soviet Union, the story is the same. A pro-Moscow regime is foisted on Afghanistan to threaten the Middle East, which then has to be aided through intervention and outright invasion. A pro-Chinese regime in Cambodia has to be destroyed so, instead of risking a confrontation with China, Vietnam is sent in to instill a pro-Moscow regime.

Let the two great powers talk by all means. But the welcome to any reduction in tension between them as a result of this will always be marred with the fear that, behind closed doors, international tensions are merely redistributed so that the smaller countries bear the major share.

Nairobi energy talks show Bitter controversy in India urgency for alternative fuel over massive loan from IMF

By Michael Hughes

Windmills slowly turning in the balmy breeze outside Nairobi's conference center for the past two weeks have symbolized a debate inside the building on the urgent need for alternative energy sources.

The 125 countries attending the United Nations conference on new and renewable sources of energy agreed on a program of action for a transition from the present global dependence on expensive and finite hydrocarbon fuels such as oil and coal. The exhibition outside the center illustrated some of these alternatives including wind power, sophisticated hydro-power schemes and simple energyconserving wood stoves developed in Kenya.

A World Bank report quoted in the program of action estimated that in the next five years developing states would need $54 billion annually for energy investment. Third-world leaders speaking at the start of the meeting, which ended Friday, stressed the effect on their economies of soaring oil prices and a lack of developed viable alternatives. Some spend 60 percent of their foreign exchange on

The program of action said: "In view of the often wasteful and inefficient utilization of hydrocarbon resources by some countries, as well as their depletable nature, it has become clear that the previous assumption of abundant and cheap energy is not valid any longer. "If the global demand for energy is to be met, it will require a breakaway from the current excessive reliance on hydrocarbons toward a more diversified mix of energy sources."

The conference discussed 10 U.N. technical reports on new or renewable energy sources and recommended assessing the resources, inducting research, exchanging information, training manpower and developing national programs. A third-world fuelwood shortage was dramatized by a wood march by black and white Kenyans who dumped bundles of wood on the steps of the conference venue. The conference called for global tree planting to be increased five-fold by the year 2000. Nations at the conference presented their own alternative energy plans and that of Israel proved the most controversial, sparking two walkouts by

Arab delegates. A conference resolution branded as illegal an Israeli project to generate hydro-power by means of a canal from the Mediterranean to the Dead Sea. The Arab states said the canal project was designed to perpetuate Israeli military rule over occupied Arab territory and could serve military

Many third world reports pointed to the alternative energy sources in their countries in need of funds and expertise for development. The hydropower potential of developing countries is about half the world's total but so far only nine percent of it has been exploited.

The opening of the meeting was marked by third-world speeches hoping that the energy crisis would bring rich and poor nations together. The plan of action commented: "There is a common interest shared by all countries in ensuring an effective energy transition, which is of critical importance to the future of mankind." But the meeting soon showed the different priorities attached to alternative energy development by the developed and developing nations.

Third world calls for new fund were firmly opposed by the United States and only a broad agreement on the need for new funding was reached. The U.S. also opposed calls for a new energy bid to develop alternative fuels but a compromise solution reached after all-night talks agreed that an interim committee will meet for two weeks during the next year to report to the U.N. General Assembly in 1982 on the possible composition of such a body.

The secretary-general of the conference Uruguayan economist Enrique Iglesias, said the meeting had been a success despite the uncertainties on the implementation of the program. He said: "The mere fact that this conference took place is important. He must wait for the long-term impact."

The U.S. delegation co-ordinator, James Stromayer, denied suggestions from journalists that the U.S. had been isolated at the meeting and had acted as a "spoiler." But many third world delegates were not satisfied that the Nairobi meeting had provided an adequate response to the energy crisis and one bitterly dubbed the result of the meeting "a program of inaction." India's negotiations for a massive loan from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) has touched off bitter controversy, with sniping by critics of the government over alleged conditions attached to the

The loan of about $5.6 billion would be the biggest ever granted by the IMF. The government says it is needed mainly to meet balance of payments deficit of $2.5 billion for the fiscal year 1980-81. Opposition politicians and other critics have mounted their attack largely on a question of national pride, alleging that conditions for the loan include devaluation of the rupee and other stiff economic measures.

One opposition member of parliament accused the government of "mortgaging the interest of the country." Confronted with charges of such preconditions, Finance Minister Ramaswami Venkataraman declared: "I will categorically state that the government will not sacrifice national interests."

But the government has refused to say what, if any, strings are attached to the loan being negotiated and has declined to give details of the discussions. The IMF extended India two loans totaling Sone billion last year. Government ministers have denied allegations of a connection between the loan and some controversial recent measures, including an anti-strike ordinance and increases in prices of petroleum products.

The ordinance, introduced while parliament was in recess, empowers Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government to ban strikes in a wide variety of "essential services." Providing for summary trials and stiff penalties for strikers and strike organizers. it is the strongest measure against industrial action since the 1975-77 state of emergency when walkouts were banned.

The ordinance forms part of a package of what the government calls anti-inflationary measures, though trade union leaders and some commentators fear it may be merely the prelude to more measures such as freezing wages and cost of living

Against the background of the loan controversy and the prospect of government's labor disputes, ministers have nevertheless appeared optimistic about the state of the economy.

Five ministers connected with the economy tolda recent television press conference that the rise in prices would be controlled to prevent runaway

Industrial growth registered a 10 percent increase in the first quarter of fiscal 1981-82: 4.1 percent last year, they said. Opposition politicians have expressed the view that price rises are perhaps the most serious issue facing the country, even though the government says the annual rate of inflation dropped to 9.8 percent last July, compared with 16.4 percent the previous year.

defended increases in prices of petroleum products and bigger compulsory deposit rates as necessary for national budgetary considerations - and denied they had anything to do with the IMF loan. In an editorial on the loan, The Financial Express newspaper said the controversy had become caught up in a series of politically and ideologically surcharged arguments, obscuring the real issues. It said that among reported conditions for the loan were quantified limits for expansion of money supply and deficit financing by the government, reduction in subsidies and liberalization of controls for increasing investment opportunities and production.

Controlling money supply and reducing fiscal deficits, particularly by reducing non-development expenditure and subsidies, had been advocated by all shades of opinion, it said. "Merely because these ideas come as a package from the IMF, there is no reason they should be rejected." "The Financial Express said. — (R)

The rise and fall of Tekere

SALISBURY -Edgar Tekere liked to refer to himself as the rough grindstone of Zimbabwe's ruling ZANU (PF) party, but two weeks ago as he reached the end of a brief and tempestuous political career, it seemed that the edge of the grindstone had been found too abrasive and the center too soft.

Tekere, aged 44, was dismissed from the influential position of party secretary-general at a closed session of the central committee last week. The decision, which was kept secret for days, left him in political wilderness and sealed a fall from grace that was nothing short of meteoric. Twelve months ago, Tekere was ranked third in seniority after Prime Minister Robert Mugabe and Simon Muzenda, his deputy. In addition to influential cabinet and party posts, he could count on a long and close association with Mugabe, both in prison and after they escaped together across the border to Mozambique in 1975.

Even a year ago, however, his acerbic brand of radicalism had raised eyebrows among his colleagues and stirred unease in the white commulty. Intemperate in speech and behavior, Tekere gained notoriety soon after independence among whites who saw him as confirming their worst fears for Zimbabwe's future and thier place in it.

His fall started almost exactly one year ago. On Aug. 6 last year. Tekere was charged with seven of his bodyguards with the nurder of farmer Gerlad Adams a few miles fro... lalisbury.

Tekere did not deny leading a 'military-style operation' which culminated in Adams' murder. His defense rested somewhat ironically on the Smith government's Indemnity and Compensation Act which bestows immunity from prosecution on government ministers and people acting on their orders in good faith to suppress terrorism.

On the basis of this defense, conducted by Louis Blom-Cooper, Tekere was acquitted. But his demeanor during the trial brought his judgment into question and his attempt to implicate Mugabe in his actions - he testified that he had told the prime minister of his intention to carry out the operation - angered senior party members.

Less than a month after he had walked from the court, a free man Tekere was dismissed as minister of manpower in Mugabe's January cabinet reshulfle. The prime minister told a press conference then that Tekere had been suffering from strain and while he might return to the cabinet in the future. for the time being he was in need of a rest.

Tekere himself did not appear unduly upset by his dismissal. He still held the position of party secretary-general which maintained his ranking in the hierarchy, and he spoke of returning to his party roots. In the following months, however, he showed little sign of exertion on the party's behalf and rumors circulated that his energies were being directed toward more earthy pursuits.

A visit to Kenya added to the controversy surrounding his name. He was linked with the daughter of a prominent Kenyan MP and an interview hegave to the local press on the Adams killing 50 incensed the administration that he was hauled in by police for questioning.

The manner in which Tekere's final downfall was revealed suggests a saddened embarrassment among his colleagues. In addition to spending more than 10 years in prison for nationalist activities, Tekere contributed much to their movement before independence. While there has been speculation that Tekere retains support among militant youth. this backing appears to be restricted to student radicals and informed sources regard the rough grindstone as a spent force. — (ONS)

Saudi Arabian Press Review that the Gulf and other states should ignore the attempts

A majority of newspapers Monday led with King Khaled's welcome to President Hassan Gouled of Djibouti, who arrived in the Kingdom Sunday for talks with the Saudi Arabian leadership. Meanwhile, Al Medina gave lead coverage to Foreign Minister Pricne Saud Al-Faisal's statement, in which he said the upcoming Cancun summit conference for the North-South dialogue will be for consultation and not negotiation. Lebanon's unceasing efforts for an Arab summit to discuss the problem of South Lebanon formed the lead story in Al Bilad newspaper.

In a prominent front-page story, Al Jazirah said that the U.S. officials admit that Saudi Arabia did not agree on limiting the use of AWACS aircraft and Washington cannot stop it from using them against Israel. Newspapers gave page one prominence to Crown Prince Fahd's approval of a grace period to borrowers from the Real Estate Development Fund for payment of housing loans. They also frontpaged the government's approval of the establishment of a SR400-million company for the development of agriculture in the country.

Discussing Saudi Arabia's attitude toward its partners in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), Al Medina noted that the Kingdom's achievement in the conference was reflected in checking the trend toward a price hike. This step, the paper said, serves the interest of producers as it provides circumstances to encourage the purchase of oil. It added that the Kingdom is convinced that its stance will serve the interests of OPEC in the first place. The paper cautioned that OPEC will find itself compelled to accept a price lower than $32 per barrel if it did not make a quick move to agree on a practical, realistic and specific price of oil.

On the same subject, Al Riyadh observed that the outcome of OPEC conference "should not make us pessimistic, but we cannot forget that the deliberations were devoid of good intentions." The paper, though, conceded that the political aspect cannot be isolated, it stressed that this aspect should stem from a deeper view of the fact that politics does not have a lasting domination on the trends of any country. The paper said that "we do not deny our moral and ethical commitment, but at the same time we hope that the future stances will stem from our own will and not from imposed choices. This is the maximum that we wish to achieve for this sensitive organization."

On the other hand, Al Nadwa concentrated on the Crown Prince's eight-point peace proposal, saying that it is based on international principles and resolutions already passed by various world bodies. The paper said that those who are still trying to bring the so-called autonomy for the Palestinians to success will be doomed to failure, except if they took recourse to terror and bloodshed. It added that friends and brothers who welcomed the Crown Prince's peace plan are convinced that it provides the ideal way to peace in the Middle East.

Discussing the Kingdom's political and economic policies, Okaz said that these policies do not only express the Saudi Arabian view but reflect the higher interests of the Arab and Islamic nation. The Crown Prince's peace plan has already received support from the Arab and Islamic world as well as several other countries which are convinced that the Camp David accords have been a total fiasco and Kingdom's peace plan provides a safe alternative for finding peace in the Middle East. Likewise, in the sphere of economy, the Kingdom has been working for the larger economic interests of the Arab and Islamic nation and the realization of economic stability in the world as a whole, the paper added.

Meanwhile, Al Bilad dealt with the Lebanese situation and accused Israel of disrupting security and stability in Lebanon to serve its own ends. The paper praised Lebanese President Elias Sarkis' efforts in resisting the Zionist machinations and foiling the Israeti plot to

Britons give up smoking, taxes worry manufacturers

By Maureen Johnson

LONDON (AP) - Hundreds of thousands of British smokers, after puffing doggedly through years of alarming reports on the risks to their health, have kicked the habit in the past six months - persuaded by savage tax hikes.

Tabacco company executives, reporting a 10-percent drop in sales, say this time smokers are sticking to their resolution. In a survey the guardian newspaper described it as the biggest and most abrupt change in national smoking habit since cigarettes were introduced at the turn of the century. "It estimated that 2 million of Britain's 17 million adult smokers have quit."

Taxes Increase Will Power

Their will was stiffend by two 1981 tax increases. In an austere March budget, the Conservative government slapped a tax of 26 cents on a pack. It followed with a 51/2 cent increase in July, sending total tax up 30 percent in six months with the average price of a pack at $1.74.

The tobacco companies, which report falling profits, are due to increase prices another 3.7 cents in the fall. The Treasury collects 75 percent of the retail price. It will get an estimated $7.44 billion dollars this year.

At this rate, in less than two years British smokers will pay for their country's $12- billion purchase of the U.S. Trident nuclear mis-

"I think any industry which has to carry this kind of burden is bound to be worried," said spokesman for the Tobacco Advisory Board which represents manufacturers.

Smoking Taxes Lives

Britons now pay up to three times more than other Europeans to indulge in a habit which is the single biggest cause of premature deaths, killing at least 50,000 Britons annually, mainly through heart disease and lung

Since the mid-1960s the Department of Health has been reeling out the statistics and eminent physicians' reports, backed by compulsory health warnings on packs. The government has also forged "voluntary" agreements with tobacco corporations to cub advertising, placing a six-year ban on televi-

Cigarette consumption had fallen only gradually until now. A 1980 government survey showed 39.5 percent of adult Britons smoked. Chancellor of the Exchaequer Sir Geoffrey Howe has aroused, as never before, turn is most marked among the professional classes — only 21 percent now smoke.

Herbert Bentley, assistant managing director of Imperial Tobacco, the largest British manufacturer, said this month there was no sign of recovery in consumption. He estimated the overall drop for the year will be 8 to 15 percent.

Bentley estimates total sales of 107 billion cigarettes this year, compared with 121.5 bil-lion in 1980. Retailers report a run on packs of 10 instead of 20s.

David Simpson, director of the government-funded anti-smoking organiza-tion, Action on Smoking and Health (ASH), is skeptical of these figures, maintaining that tobacco companies have reported falling sales in the past to drum up government concern about unemployment.

Now, Simpson siad, "We really quite thrilled. We are fairly optimistic there is a real change, which will be a lasting one as long as the chancellor moves to keep prices up."

Both sides question each other's statistics.

The Tobacco Advisory Council says people conceal or underestimate their smoking in answering surveys. "This is understandable, because they're made to feel guilty about it," the spokesman said.

Hat designer describes line as playacting

By Barbara Schuler NEW YORK. (N) — Hats, everywhere hats: On every available chair (the receptionist graciously moves them for visitors), on the window leage, leaning against the telephone. under the desk, even on the hat racks - five or six of them, at least. This is Frank Olive's world and into it, one torrid summer morning, the designer bursts, arms loaded with the beginnings of what in a few months will be his

Olive is dissuaded from launching immediately into his new collection only by the opportunity to show off the one he has last completed. "The hat isn't part of etiquette any more," he muses, as he directs a saleswoman in an informal showing of some of his fall styles. "It's part of being playful and being imaginative ..., it's playacting."

Olive's fall collection allows many roles.

There are tailored polo hats — "everyone's into polo because of Prince Charles" - Bush hats and sailors trimmed in ribbon or snakeskin, more romantic cavaliers and cloches adorned with veils and feathers, gold and bronze leather turbans with jeweled teardrops or butterflies, standard crocheted hats dressed up with gold threads. The best sellers for fall, says Olive, are the flip brim and the glider or tuck sailor - softer, rounder styles that are in keeping with the overall mood of

While others who started in military have broadened their horizons with tremendous success - Adolfo and Halston, among the more notable - Frank Olive seems content to stake most of his fortune on hats. The going has not always been easy. "I went into the hat business when people were taking them off, they were taking them right off of their heads," recalls Olive: "people thought I

Hat Fortunes changeable Over the last 25 years, Olive has seen the fortunes of the hat business raise and fall along with those of the rest of the fashion industry. "We can all think in terms of fashion of the '30s or '40s because that was one of the most pronounced times in fashion," be says. "You had movie stars and people emulated them ... you had so many different characters, you had a very soigne-type woman, then you had a little Dolly Dimples, you had everybody's sweetheart and Joan

They did all these wonderful things to create different looks, then all of a sudden women started to look alike," he laments, thinking back on the last 10 or 20 years. "It was a polustr world of double knots and lightbulb hair combs and orthopedic shoes," he says, a time when his business consisted mostly of basic little fedoras - and he considered himself lucky to be able to sell those. Hats popular with women

Now women are dressing up again and Ofive is more optimistic than ever. "At the moment, at this time in my life," he says, "I have the customer I've always dreamed of. "I'm not just saying that she's a celebrity. She doesn't have to be Mrs. (Hugh) Carey and she doesn't have to be Phyllis George and she doesn't have to be Diana Ross." (Though she might well be all are among his customers.) Olive sees today's hat-wearer as a young, professional, involved woman, one who knows fashion and is relatively sure of herself, "The woman who wears a hat, to me, has a personality. She's one step ahead of the other ladies. She has a point of view."

Olive should know — he spends 22 weeks a year traveling the country, getting to know his customers and letting them get to know him, "That's how I built my customers," he says. "I went to the boondocks, I went to California and I went to Denver and to Phoenix ... it was very enlightening. I won a good audience I got their confidence and I know who they are." After the years of traveling, the tall-blond-and-handsome Oliver has become his own best salesman. "Invariably", he says, "if I show her a hat, she'll buy it. I take the time to understand my customer. I don't try to sell her something that she would be uncomfortable in."

The obvious delight Oliver shows in pleasing a customer dates back to when he was 12 years old and made his first try at millinery. "I trimmed some hats for my aunt. I would steam them, brush them, little things." though his goals were not originally in that direction, Oliver says, "I could always make a dollar making a hat"

Growing up in Wisconsin in the 1930s, Oliver says, he spent a lot of time listening to the radio, thus firmly establishing his interest in the theater and his desire to become a costume designer. While his twin brother went off to become an engineer. Olive, with the full support of his parents, made his way through two art schools in Wisconsin, then

His work in costume design took him all over the country and eventually, in the mid-'50s, to New York, where the bottom dropped out. All the shows on Broadway had been there forever and showed every sign of staying, he recalls, and the union was accepting no new members. With that door closed to him, a new one opened by chance one evening when he met designer Norman Norell in a Greenwich Village restaurant. He showed Norell some of his costume sketches, but the famed designer had only one question: "-Whose hats are they?"

liner Chandra and the millinery department at Saks Fifth Avenue. "It was a very primitive way of making hats," he says of those early days. "We were making two hats a day and I could see the writing on the wall... that makcourse, Saks, found out it wasn't in theirs, either, and they closed all those custom departments." From Saks, Oliver took a job downtown for half of what he ver earning just so he could learn the mechanics of the business and, about 15 years ago, went into

Advised "make hats"

"They're nobody's," Oliver remembers bluring out before telling him there were his own designs. "Well, you should go into the hat business," Norell advised. Which is just what Olive did - as he tells it, the very next days. He opened a part-time hat business in a former village popcorn stand, and from there was discovered and given work by the miling hats like that was not in my future. Of business for himself.

Producers Under Four Labels Today, his enterprise flourishes. From the bustling factory adjoining the 39th street showroom. Olive's staff produces about 300 hats a day (up to 600 during the busy spring season) under four labellive Branch, Frank's Girl, Frank Olive and From My Private Collection. Meanwhile, another factory across town is turning out lower-priced hats - 250 dozen a day — under the Counter-Fit By Frank Olive label. The less expensive line allows Olive to do something many designers probably have given a lot of thought to doing knocking themselves off before anyone

Summer means barbeques

This cooking is southern tradition,

"The quality of meat is important in a barbeque," Strickland says. "You can't just cook any old fatty meat and expect it to taste great with sauce." He and Price prefer three-down ribs, that is, slabs of spare ribs that weight 3 pounds or less. (The larger slabs, for example, 5 and 6 pounds, have tougher meat with more fat). The ribs are cooked for an hour to an hour-and-a-half and the large pieces of chicken (broilers or fryers) should stay on the erill about an hour.

Knowing precisely when the meat is done is a tricky business; sometimes it's just a question of experience. But in the meatime, novice cookers may test by inserting a sharp knife into the meat to be sure it's not pink.

If you have good meat, there's no need to marinate it overnight. The only thing you might want to do before cooking, Price recommends, is to trim some of the fat from the back of the ribs.

Now, about that barbeque sauce. First of dl. in many Southern fa secret, passed down from grandfather to father to son, with some modifications along the way. It can be tomato-based, vinegarbased, mustard-based, chili-flavored and even flavored with fruit or honey. There's no one authentic Southern-style barbeque sauce, so it's fine to disagree over the best

Most old-time barbequers in the South do agree as to when to brush the "secret" sauce onto the met — approximately five to 10 minutes before it's done. Of course, you must turn the meat several times after the sauce has been brushed on both sides. If you cook meat for the full hour or so with harbeque sauce on it, the sauce turns black and has that burned flavor instead of a nice tangy taste, Price adds. He has tried all kinds of sauces but now sticks to his grandfather's recipe.

Now, what do you serve with the ribs and chicken? For a complete Southern meal, try potato salad, baked beans, corn on the cob. hot bread or rolls and a simple fruit pie, say peach or strawberry. Capri attracts the wealthy, it's safe, good investment

CAPRI, Italy, (R) — Capri, the island playground of Roman emperors and expatnate aesthetes, has cast a new spell over a more hard-headed breed of admirers. The newcomers are rich Italian businessmen and industrialists, escaping the chaos of the mainland and deterred from the alternative attractions of Sardinia by its record of banditry and kidnapping. In Capri, as elsewhere in Italy this season, foreign tourism has been doing an indifferent trade, reflected in the empty tables of Capri town's tourist restaurants.

But in newly fashionable trattorias hidden among lemon groves or clinging to sheer cliffs looking across the gulfs of Napes and Salerno, the tables are packed with expensively-dressed Italians talking of

They come to Capri for one paramount reason: Security. The island, too small for hiding places and with few landing points, offers a fortness sanctuary against kidnap-ping, according to local Police Chief Pasquale Migliaccio.

Commandant Migliaccio, who leads the island's Carabinieri paramilitary force, may be Italy's least hurried policeman.

"There simply isn't any serious crime here," he said. "There are occasional thefts and sometimes we see a few crooks coming off the ferry from Naples.

Capri's combination of beauty and expensively-purchased exclusivity stands in stark contrast to the neighboring coastline.

A short boat trip to the north, the city of Naples is still suffering from the effects of last November's earthquake, which made thousands of people homeless. Owners of second homes have had them requisitioned to try and solve the problem.

Among the city's disincentives for the wealthy are urban guerrilla violence, increasing petty crime and vicious gang warfare which has claimed more than a hundred victims this year.

One well-heeled refugee to Capri from Naples gave his view of the city to the Rome daily. Il Messagero.

"The unemployed are burning buses in Naples, but who cares? he said. "Earthquake?...Oh yes,...the earthquake. It all seems reminiscent of Capri's first famous resident, the Emperor Tiberius." The historian Suctonius recorded that Tiberius, weary of office and terrified of plots, retreated to the island in 27 A.D. to rule his empire from a distance for 10 years.

The emperor, said Suetonious, "preferred to rule by decree so that he did not see the consequences of his actions," entertaining himself in his villas while the empire seethed in ferment over the horizon.

OVER THE HORIZON: Capri is becoming an attractive getaway for Italian businessmen and industrialists to escape the chaos of the mainland without risking kidnappine. In Capri they can leave behind scenes like those above where homeless earthquake victims await the completion of their new homes.

The meet is part of a qualification series to select the African team to compete in next month's World Cup in Rome.

Meanwhile Olympic decathlon champion Daley Thompson will not compete for British in the European Cup combined events final, at Birmingham next weekend.

Thompson made his final decision early Sunday. David Shaw secretary of the British Amateur Athletic Board said in London that he did not want to give any reason for Thompson's absence.

But he said "I would like to express the disappointment of all athletics supporters and athletes alike that he will not be there at the weekend," said Shaw.

"We received a note from him last week saying 'no' to selection, but we kept hoping." It is understood that Thompson is worried by a foot injury. A friend at his home said. "He has his foot in an ice bath."

Thompson's absence is a severe blow to Cup finals in Zagreb with another fine performance in the decathlon final.

McEnroe delights on way to crown

MASON, Ohio, Aug. 24 (AP) — John McEnroe captured the finals of the Association of Tennis Professionals Sunday, winning the $32,000 purse and the approval of the fans in defeating Chris Lewis of New Zealand 6-3, 6-4.

McEnroe delighted the crowd when he gave Lewis several points in a battle which McEnroe controlled most of the way. At one point, McEnroe told a linejudge, "If you can't see that, what are you doing in the chair? The judge responded, "First serve".

McEnroe looked back at the judge, swatted the tennis ball away and said, "Here's my first serve." The crowd cheered. The crowd had not given McEnroe much support during his previous matches at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center at Kings Island. The only time during the week-long tournament that the crowd seemed to be behind McEnroe was during a Friday match against Bob Lutz.

'They weren't behind me", he said "Until it looked like I might lose. It's not fun when you double-fault and people appland. Just once I'd like to know what it feels like to have people on your side."

Following the game, Lewis said he still considered it the "biggest match I ever

India records 7% income rise

NEW DELHI, Aug. 24 (AP) - India's national income registered an estimated 7 percent increase in fiscal 1980-81 over the previous year, the government's National SampleSurveyOrganization (NSSO) has said. The estimated increase in total income, which is higher than the 6.5 percent anticipated by the finance ministry's economic sur-

The increase in total income is because of higher industrial and agricultural production in 1980-81, ending March 31. The income rise takes into account the growth of population during the year. The exact size of the 1980-81 national income was not given by the NSSO, however, in the previous year, India's national income totaled 443.3 billion rupees ($49.3 billion) at the current exchange

Morita said that there is no danger of the picture quality and color deteriorating, which was a problem with conventional slides.

The Mavica is unlikely to be available to the public for another 18 months. Initially it will have 25 mm, 50 mm and zoom lenses. The price will be comparable with that of a good quality reflex camera or roughly $660, Sony estimates. The projector will cost some $220 and the magnetic cassette $2.6, Morita said the company had no intention of "killing off" the familiar 35 mm camera. This product would be offered to "a new market," initially consisting of mainly the general public. He

The system works on electromagnetic principles of video. After an image comes through the lens, it is converted into electronic signals by a solid state imager Sony calls a CCDH (charge coupled device). The signals are then recorded on a magnetic disk called the 'Mavipak' that weighs slightly more than a third of an ounce (9.4 grams).

Each magnetic disk can be stored up to 50 color pictures. The disks can be removed from the camera at any time and later reused for further picture taking without any danger of recording over previous images. Sony claims recorded material can be erased from the disk, and the disk re-used with no deterioration of picture or color quality.

Images recorded on the disks can be displayed instantly on a home TV set, but this requires the use of a specially designed playback unit. Through another specially designed adaptor, the camera can be used to take moving pictures when hooked to Sony's Beoamax videotape recorder. Hook-ups through other components allow for duplication of pictures recorded on disks and transmission over telephone lines.

Acting minister of state for cabinet affairs, Dr. Abdel Rahman Al Awadi, said a cabinet session examined reports about the blaze and decided to set up special committees to investigate the fire and devise precautionary systems for the future.

The cabinet expressed thanks to Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, and the United Arab Emirates for offering help to extinguish the oil blaze.

Al Awadi said every employee at the refinery had been interviewed as part of the inquiry into its origins. According to the Kuwait press agency the blaze continued to decrease in intensity Sunday and fire was out in six of the seven tanks affected. Riyal deposit rates ease

azilou Mart

JEDDAH, Aug. 24 - Riyal deposit rates eased Monday by a further one-half percent in most tenors in face of dollar fluctuations on the European bourses. Dealers described Monday's European activities as "nervous and chaotic" with the dollar finding little trading direction. Interest rate uncertainties seemi to be unsettling the markets. With dollar rates still at 181/4 percent for the short tenors, the American currency is still attractive to investors, but recent conflicting announcements about interest rates trends have made the market cautious about the direction of dollar inter-

The British pound continued to fluctuate between 1.8450 to 1.8760 by late afternoon, with operators uncertain on what position to take. The introduction of the new open market monetary mechanism by the Bank of England last Thursday, seems to have been greeted cautiously by London institutions, but the effect has been to create market uncertainty about British interest rates which have seen a rise to levels of 131/4

The German mark, however, had a quieter day. Trading between 2.4480 to 2.4560 for most of the day without any signs of Bundesbank intervention. The Japanese yen similarly, had a quiet day trading at 228/227.00 yens to the dollar. The Swiss and French francs gained some ground against the American currency taking the rate for the Swiss franc to 2.1350 levels and the French franc to 5.8580. The French government must be pleased that the franc seems to have stabilized for the time being at 5.85/5.90 levels after the dramatic fall only a few weeks ago to 6.17 levels.

The local exchanges and money markets reflected the European uncertainties by pushing down interest and exchange rates in thin and cautious trading. Spot rival/dollar rates opened at "indicative" rates of 3.4210-20, but gradually had to come down to levels of 3.4195-05 at attract business. Some levels were reported out of the Bahraini based OBU's - offshore banking units — but brokers were quoted as saying that majority of such transactions were for book - squaring purposes rather than position taking.

On the deposit front, riyal interest rates continued to be quoted, if not actively traded, at rates lower than their dollar counterparts, with one-month rival at 17% -18% percent and one-month dollar at 18 7/16 - 18 9/16 percent. However, by rate afternoon, dealers had brought down the riyal deposit rate to levels of $16\frac{1}{2}$ — $17\frac{1}{8}$ percent in some instances when the effects of the European market movements were digested locally. Long-term deposits also came off from opening levels of 1614 -16% percent for the one-year to 16 - 16 1/7 percent. It is noticeable that the shortterm rivals have fallen much faster than the long-term deposits, indicating that investors are still only prepared to lend long-term surplus rivals available.

Boeing sued for $100m

SEATTLE, Aug. 24 (AP) — The Boeing Co. is being sued for $100 million in a suit filed as the result of the 1978 New Year's day crash of a 747 in which all 213 people aboard

The suit against Boeing and co-defendants Lear Siegler, Inc. and Rockwell International Corp. surfaced in a hearing before U.S. District Court Judge James M.Fitzgeraldin Seat-

Many of the passengers were oil workers going to jobs in the United Arab Emirates when the plane crashed into the sea.

Heirs to the estates of 161 dead Indian passengers claim instrument controls in the Boeing jet were faulty. Their lawyer, Lee Kreindler, said the case belongs in U.S. federal courts because it involves liability of U.S.-made products.

Defense lawyers urged Fitzgerald to throw the case out of American courts. Witnesses and Air India service records are in India, where the case should be heard, they contended. Attorneys for the 20 jet crewmembers and two American passengers have also filed damage suits.

The suit claims faulty equipment caused the jet's attitude directional indicator to stick and kill the warning system. That caused the pilot to throw the plane into too steep a bank, the suit contends.

Lear Siegler made the attitude direction indicator. Rockwell made the warning system, and Boeing made the plane. Boeing attorney Keith Gerrard argued the crash was "an operational accident" caused by "an incompetent pilot," a diabetic who had returned to drinking. Air India has already paid damages to passenger estates as stipulated by international civil aviation law.

Judge Fitzgerald has listened to accident accounts from both sides in May and August pretrial hearings. He heard a tape recording that began with Captain Madan L. Kukar telling his passengers good evening, followed by static and agitated voices.

Clinton H. Coddington, Lear Seigler's lawyer, said evidence other than the digital

Plastic bullets fired on rioters

Irish guerrilla joins Maze fast

BELFAST, Aug. 24 (AP) - Police fired plastic bullets to disperse rioters at a police station in Northern Ireland early Monday, hours before a sixth Irish Republican guerrilla joined the Maze Prison hunger strike,

Police said about a dozen rioters armed with gasoline bombs attacked a Royal Ulster Constabulary station in Coalisland, about 48 kms west of Belfast. They were turned back by volleys of plastic bullets and no injuries were reported.

The trouble broke out in the early hours following an appearance in Coalisland by Owen Carron, newly elected successor in the British Parliament to dead IRA guerrilla Bobby Sands.

Carron said over the weekend he will seek Monday to hold talks with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on ending the Maze protest, which began March 1 in an effort to win political prisoner status for nationalist guerrillas jailed in Northern Ireland.

The new hunger striker, Bernard Fox, is a former co-worker of Sands. Fox, a Belfast native worked for the same bus manufacturing company as Sands.

Fox, 30, was sentenced in 1979 to 12 years in prison on charges of planting bombs and possessing timing devices for explosives. He was replacing Patrick Quinn, 29, whose family authorized doctors to save his life after he

Sculptress discovers lost Atlantis

PARIS, Aug. 24 (AFP) - A French sculptress Monday claimed to have discovered the lost continent of Atlantis off the Atlantic coast of Ireland. Nicole Buisson, speaking by telephone from Londonderry, said she had made the discovery with six amateur divers, including an cameraman.

She said the team was investigating a temple built about 1,000 B.C. to the glory of the Sea God, Poseidon, on a tiny island off Ireland. The temple had a rose-colored dome on four 15-meter columns which were "engraved with aHebraic-like script relating past history, and the origins at Atlantis.

Mrs. Buisson said the temple was 14 meters underwater. She would not say where it was situated. She said that a cataclysm destroyed Atlantis in 6,500 B.C. and the "lost continent" exploded into 2,500 islands and islets off the Scots, British and Irish coasts. She admitted that her discovery owed more to "a supernatural power" than the scientific research.

Hinckley indicted

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AFP) federal grand jury Monday indicted John Hinckley Jr., for the attempted murder here last March of President Ronald Reagan.

Hinckley, aged 26, is also charged with the attempted murder of White House press secretary James Brady, still in hospital, secret service bodyguard Tim McCarthy, and policeman Tom Delahanty. McCarthy and Delahanty have resumed activity. The jury took only a few moments to reach a decision. Hinckley will next appear before a federal judge, who will inform him of the indictment. His lawvers will also state whether he intends to plead guilty or not guilty slipped into a coma July 31 after 46 days on hunger strike. Quinn later decided not to resume the protest. With the addition of Fox, six inmates were participating in the fast. A seventh, Patrick McGeown, 25, was given emergency medical treatment at his family's request last Thursday, and it was unclear whether he would rejoin the hunger strike

Ten jailed guerrillas have died since Sands began the hunger strike March 1. Sands was elected to the British Parliament in April but never took his seat and died May 5. The man elected last week to replace him, Sands' campaign manager Owen Carron, said Sunday he would submit a formal request Monday to meet with Mrs. Thatcher.

"My election gives an opportunity to the British government to solve the H-block issue without a loss of face," he said in a radio interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

The Irish Nationalist prisoners in the H-shaped Maze cellblocks have been demanding the right to wear their own clothes, do no prison work, associate freely among themselves, receive mail and visitors more often and have their sentence reduced by half for good behavior, a privilege suspended because of their protests.

Mrs. Thatcher has steadfastly resisted on grounds that any concessions would give the convicted criminals prisoner-of-war status and thereby legitimize their violence. She has also refused to meet with any of the guerrilla leaders "under duress" - that is, while the protest continues. The predominantly Roman Catholic IRA is seeking to end Northern Ireland's status as a British province and reunite the Protestant-dominated north with the mostly Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

An official British source would say only that Carron's request to meet with Mrs. Thatcher in his new capacity as member of parliament-elect would be "considered when it is received," Mrs. Thatcher is to return from vacation later in the week.

In Belfast, the British Army reported that an off-duty soldier was shot to death by accident early Sunday during a search for an armed intruder at Musgrave Park Hospital, where McGeown was recovering in the intensive care unit. An army spokesman said a full investigation was underway into the death of Sgt. William Corbeto, 34, from Arbroath, Another soldier, meanwhile, was in a Londonderry hospital with head injuries suffered when a rock was thrown through the door of the armored car in which he was riding. He was said to be in satisfactory condition after the attack, which took place in the city's predominantly Catholic Bogside district.

Voyager 2 to unravel mystery of Saturn moon

Poles to resume media talks

PASADENA, California, Aug. 24 (AP) — Voyager 2, sailing within 700,000 miles (1,126,500 kms) of Saturn on the eve of its rendezvous with the golden, ringed world, adds another moon to its trophy case Monday night when its cameras focus on the little satellite, Hyperion.

The robot ship's cameras and 10 instruments are casting about in all directions, revealing new details of the churning and weaving clouds, probing mysteries of the shimmering rings and watching moons grow larger as the ship prepares for mankind's best look at Saturn on Tuesday.

"We are bewildered explorers," photo-graphic team leader Bradford Smith said during the weekend. Nearly 10 months after sister ship Voyager I cruised the planet, he said, "We have made very little progress" in untangling the many riddles it revealed.

The flight plan for Tuesday's encounter was extensively rewritten to look more deeply at some of those puzzles. Now, Smith said, scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory "are just...hoping the answer to some of these questions are going to be found in some of these Voyager 2 data."

Voyager I, on its tour of Saturn in November, saw Hyperion as little more than a fuzzy ball as it came no closer than 550.000 miles (885,115 kms). Scientists should see a lot more as this second Voyager comes 250,000 miles (402,325 kms) closer Monday. The radio signals need 86 minutes to cover almost a billion miles (1.61 billion kms) to

Just 180 miles (290 kms) across, Hyperion is the third most-distant of the 17 known moons scattered about the Saturnian neighborhood. The ship flew past the strange, two-toned moon Inpetus on Saturday night. By far the biggest puzzle found last year was the astonishing complexity of the fabled rings, a vast sheet of snowy particles that circle Saturday's equator.

Old explanations fell apart when Voyager I found the board rings filled with hundreds of thin ringlets and saw a narrow ring that seems composed of braided ringlets, several eccentric or out-of-round ringlets and broad smudges reaching across part of the rings.

A popular theory suggests many tiny moons -- ranging in diameter from perhaps half a mile to 20 miles (.8 to 32 kms) - may be sprinkled through the rings acting as shepherds as their gravities mix with Saturday's to herd the particles into the little ringlets. So Voyager 2 is aiming its cameras at several likely spots in search of the theorized

Chief Voyager scientist Edward Stone said Sunday, "a little moonlet buried in the rings...will form a gap" by sweeping out its orbit. One large gap is about 300 miles (483 kms) wide and if the moonlet theory is accurate, he said, it should hold a moon to 18 miles (19 to 29 kms) across and Voyager should be able to spot it.

Smith said scientists have examined about one-third of the moonlet-hunt pictures taken so far and "we have to detect one of these embedded satellites."

He also said an explanation to the Iapetus bizarre surface, as dark as anything in the solar system on one side and shiny as snow on the other, will have to wait for more detailed analysis of Voyager's Saturday night prob-

Nkomo opposes one-party rule

SALISBURY, Aug. 24 (AFP) — A one-party state in Zimbabwe would destabilize the country, minority Patriotic Front leader Joshua Nkomo has said.

In an interview published here Monday, Nkomo, minister without portfolio in the coalition government, was reacting to a weekend statement by Prime Minister Robert Mugabe that a referendum could be held to decide if Zimbabwe should become a one party state.

"If we want to destabilize this country, then let's talk about one-party state," Nkomo said. "As far as I am concerned there can be no one-party state in this country against the wishes of the people..."

Nkomo heads the minority Ndebele tribe which has long feared domination by the Shona people of Mugabe, who outnumber them by more than seven to one.

The Patriotic Front holds 20 of the 80 black seats in parliament, where Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front Party has an overall majority of 57. Mugabe said that nothing would stand in the way of making Zimbabwe a one-party state if citizens approved the project in a referendum that is to be held "some time in the future."

Nepal seizes watches from Soviet cargoes

KATMANDU, Nepal, Aug. 24 (AP) -Customs officials here said Monday they had seized about $500,000 worth of contraband wristwatches concealed inside a cargo of three boxes addressed to the Soviet Embassy in Katmandu.

The officials refused to reveal the number of watches brought into the country on a commercial flight from Bangkok, Thailand. Soviet Embassy officials who appeared at the airport to pick up a consignment of boxes were reported to have disowned the watches and told the Nepalese officials that people might have sent the contraband in an attempt to defame the embassy.

Good Morning

The Great Patriot went to the mighty Sultan, "O mighty one," he said, "I have an invention to end all inventions. Give me leave to show you."

"Show, O Great Patriot!" the Sultan said. Upon which the man took out of his pocket a piece of paper. "This is it. A formula for a type of armor nothing can pierce. Not even an atom bomb. Make your tanks out of that and our dear country is invincible." "O Patriot," the Sultan smiled, "I've always had such hopes in you. Such genius, such devotion. Now name your price, and remember it's no time to be modest, my boy."

"Price!" the Great Patriot was shocked. "Price! As my name shows, O mighty one, the only price I'll ever seak is to be allowed to serve my country." The Sultan was of course very pleased. Inventions don't grow on trees. He was toying with the notion of giving the chap a medal (third class, of course) when the G.P. resumed "A billion dollars, on the other hand, would do nicely for my favorite charity. It bas no name, just a numbered account abroad."

"It shall be done," said the Sultan. 'Now if you'll excuse me..'

"Of course, mightiness," Groveled the G.P. "But not till I show my other invention. "Here he put his hand in another pocket and took another paper out." This here," he said a trifle sententiously," is a piece of paper which will revolutionize the entire theory and practice of warfare.

"For it is a formula for a type of explosive guaranteed to pierce any armor whatsoever, even the most up-to-date one namely the one just patented by that great scientist... Now, I can't go round with such a formula in my pocket. What if it falls into our enemies' hands? And you know how clever they are. Why they even know of that numbered account I told you about." The Sultan was very worried, "And how many pockets do you have in that suit?" he asked. "Around fifty, great one!" the G.P. answered. "Guards!" the Sultan said, "seize the fellow and kill him! And Moral to all Great Patriots: Pace Your
